

SLUSS: Supreme Court orders hearing in murder case

miscarriage of justice to allow them to participate as jurors in Sluss's trial," the opinion said.

The opinion says that Sluss is entitled to an additional hearing to investigate potential juror misconduct.

"Evidence was presented after trial suggesting that the two jurors were 'friends' with April Brewer, on the social media website Facebook during the trial, despite their indication during voir dire that they did not know the victim or her family or the circumstances of the case," the opinion says.

April Brewer's daughter, Destiny, was killed in a head-on collision in Martin County in which three others were injured.

One of the jurors stated in voir dire that she did not use Facebook, the opinion said, but Sluss provided screenshots showing the two jurors were friends of Brewer, the opinion said.

It was noted in the opinion that "a juror who is a 'Facebook friend' with a family member of a victim, standing alone, is arguably not enough evidence to presume juror bias sufficient to require a new trial."

"As with every other instance where a juror knows or is acquainted with someone closely tied to a case, it is the extent of the interaction and the scope of the relationship that is the relevant inquiry," the Supreme Court ruling said.

Sluss was sentenced to life in prison in April 2011 for convictions of murder, first-degree assault, two counts of fourth-degree assault, second-offense operating a motor vehicle under the influence of alcohol/drugs within five years and tampering with physical evidence.

Sluss was arrested at the scene of the June 25, 2010, crash and initially charged with DUI and four counts of wanton endangerment; however, during his arraignment in district court, Special District Judge Dan Sparks amended one of the charges to murder to reflect the death of Destiny Brewer.

The indictment said he wantonly operated a motor vehicle under circumstances manifesting extreme indifference to the value of human life, thereby creating a grave risk of death and or serious physical injury to another person which resulted in serious physical injury to Blanche Robinson and three other children.

The indictment also says that Sluss is a previously convicted felon.

The jury recommended a life sentence for the murder charge, which means Sluss won't be eligible for parole for 20 years. Jurors also recommended 20 years for the first-degree assault; 12 months in jail for each of the fourth-degree assault charges; six months for second-offense operating a motor vehicle under the influence and five years for tampering with physical evidence.

The jury recommended the charges be served consecutively; however, Preston said Thursday that state law requires them to be served concurrently due to the life sentence for murder.

$33,700 and making him eligible to play in the final bonus round.

Carter solved the final puzzle for an additional $35,000, bringing his total winnings to $68,700 in cash and trips.

In an interview with The Big Sandy News prior to the program's airing, Carter said he signed up to receive e-mails through the Wheel Watcher's Club. This wasn't his first attempt at getting on the show.

"Last year I went to Chattanooga, Tennessee. This time it was in Louisville, and I was in Lexington, so I thought I would give it a try," Carter said. "I went on a Saturday and filled out a card and they pulled names. I actually got to get on stage and tried to do a good interview. I got booed pretty big when they found out where I work."

Carter said show producers look for personality and the ability to solve puzzles. He also said they actually hand out written puzzles as well and that all participating contestants leave with at least $1,000.

"The final round was at the

George Carter

Brown Hotel in June," Carter said. "During the first audition, I got to ask for one or two letters and they were looking for personality and during the second there were 70 or so people there. They handed out a written puzzle and then cut the list more and then there were more simulated puzzles. Two weeks after the final audition, I was in California."

Carter said the show doesn't pay for the trip.

"Vanna White met with the contestants that morning, and the producers went over the rules," Carter said. "I didn't actually meet Pat Sajak until the taping of the show. It was great and they were so nice."

Meanwhile, Rossalene Mullins Cox, a retired teacher from Martin County, was also successful in her attempt to be on the show and recently received an e-mail that said she will be traveling to California Oct. 4 for her taping of the show, which is scheduled to air between Dec. 31 and Jan. 11, 2013.

Lawrence deputy honored for actions after tornado

by Lilly Adkins
ASSOCIATE EDITOR

LOUISA — Lawrence County Sheriff Garrett Roberts' chief deputy, Mark Wheeler, was awarded the Medal of Valor by the Kentucky Sheriffs' Association during a ceremony at the Galt House in Louisville Sept. 20 for his efforts during the recent tornado that claimed the lives of two people.

Roberts recommended Wheeler for the award. In his letter making the nomination, Roberts talked about the tornado from March 2 and the fact that it was something Lawrence County had never experienced. He also talked about the tornado touching down at 6:15 p.m. in the left Fork of Little Blaine Road, with possible entrapment. "As the first responders go en route trying to cut their way through all the downed trees and debris, Wheeler, home at the time, radioed me asking if I needed him to respond," Roberts said in the letter. "His home and family just live two miles away from the scene. Getting approximately one mile away, he continued on foot through the dark, heaving rain, falling trees and debris to get to the residence. As he got closer, he came in contact with the first victim of the tornado, a 15-year-old boy walking in a daze down the road. This is when Wheeler knew it was worse than first expected. The home of this young boy had been picked up turned upside down, landing in the middle of the road with three other people trapped inside."

The grandparents and the boy's sister were still inside, the letter said.

"Not thinking of his own safety, he knew what had to be done, those people needed help. With debris falling all around, Wheeler made his way inside the home, all the while trying to keep this young man calm, where he found the Grandpa seriously hurt but talking, the 14-year-old sister confirmed dead and the 69-year-old Grandma entrapped," Roberts said in the letter. "With all his determination he was unable to free the Grandma. The top of the home had fallen across her. She stated to Wheeler that she was not in pain, just trapped. Knowing this was not the place of the original call, he assured them he would get more help and went to the next residence to assess the scene. There he would find another older male with a broken leg. Wheeler continued to keep calm relaying information to dispatch for the first responders. When he returned to the first home the Grandmother had passed away. Wheeler stayed with the young man and the Grandfather until fire units were able to free him from the debris. The Grandfather was taken to a hospital in West Virginia where he was treated for severe head trauma."

Roberts said Wheeler "showed true bravery on this night" and made him "proud to have him as part of my team with the Lawrence County Sheriff's Office and for the Kentucky Sheriff's Association."

"True to the Law Enforcement Motto to serve and protect. With this being said, it is my honor to nominate Wheeler for the KSA's Medal of Valor award."

A letter dated July 2 was also written by the family of those lost during the tornado in which they recommend Wheeler be commended for his heroic efforts.

"There is no words to completely express how grateful my family is to the entire Lawrence County Sheriff's Department, however one deputy, Mark Wheeler stands out as going above and beyond the call of duty and of God in his rescue efforts," Glen Chaffins, Karen Wodd and family said in their letter. "The comfort he brought to my son's and I in bringing us the terrible news that we had lost my mother, Joyce Chaffins and my young daughter, Samantha, we were devastated. Deputy Wheeler showed kindness, concern and good moral fortitude in the days and weeks that followed. Wheeler and his family came to help us time and again in recovery efforts and brought my heart the solace I so badly needed. I would like to see this deputy receive commendation for his heroic efforts."

The chairman of the KSA Awards Committee sent a letter to Roberts dated Aug. 27 notifying him that Wheeler was approved for the award.

The Medal of Valor may be presented to a sworn member of a sheriff's agency who, as a result of law enforcement action, distinguishes themselves by an act of bravery, at imminent personal danger to life.

Wheeler has been employed with the Lawrence County Sheriff's Office since March 2004. He is a 1992 graduate of Lawrence County High School, and he and his wife Kerry have been married for 18 years. They have two children, Allison and Drew.

Wheeler graduated from Ashland Vocational Technical School in 1994 as a diesel mechanic and served in the United States Army from August 1996 to October 1999 as Kiowa Warrior Armament/Missile Repairer.

Wheeler graduated the Department of Criminal Justice Training in Richmond in 2004 and was promoted to the rank of chief deputy with the Lawrence County Sheriff's Office in 2009.

COUPLE: Man and wife are reported missing in Johnson

Larry and Sandara Blanton have not reportedly made contact with anyone except their son since Sept. 5, and Johnson County Sheriff Dwayne Price says he has reason to believe something bad has happened to the couple.

"Their son, William Blanton, lives in a trailer they own and it's located on their property," Price said. "When we interviewed Willie, he said that he saw them last Sunday around 7 p.m. and that they were in an unknown blue Nissan. He said they told him they were going to go to Florida on vacation and get away for a while. I entered the vehicle into NCIC on Saturday and an alert was issued, but we've still heard nothing."

Price also said the couple's cell phone had not been used since Sept. 5 and that he has subpoenaed their bank account records, but has not yet received them.

"The vehicle, their cards, their clothing and their cell phones are still at the residence, and the only one who has supposedly spoken to them since Sept. 5 is their son," Price said. "I feel that is suspicious and I will keep the investigation going. Her mother is the one who reported them missing. She said she called for one whole week and that Willie finally called her back and told her they went camping. She reported it on Friday."

William Blanton said in a television interview that "it's not like them to leave." He also said that his parents left eight days ago, saying they were going to Florida on vacation, but he also said that he's never known them to go on vacation.

Price said his office has done a walk-through on the property.

"We plan to use every resource," Price said. "We are coordinating and will be using dogs later this week if we still haven't heard anything."

Anyone with information as to the couple's whereabouts is asked to contact the Johnson County Sheriff's Office at (606) 789-3411. Callers can remain anonymous.

MARCUM: Ex-prosecutor disbarred by Supreme Court

Association Board of Governors to disbar Marcum, who is a former commonwealth's attorney for Johnson, Lawrence and Martin counties.

"In this case, the six felonies for committing crimes that reflect adversely on the lawyer's honesty, trustworthiness and fitness as a lawyer would be more than sufficient to merit permanent disbarment," the Supreme Court order said. "Including his previous disciplinary record and his failing to respond to a lawful demand for information from a disciplinary authority, there can be no doubt that the Board was justified in recommending permanent disbarment."

The KBA Inquiry Commission issued a charge against Marcum on Feb. 28, which was served by the Franklin County Sheriff's Office on April 3, charging him with two counts of violating Supreme Court rules.

Marcum filed no answer to the charges and the board concluded by a vote of 19-0 that he was guilty of the violations, according to the Supreme Court order.

In agreeing with the board of governors' recommendation to disbar Marcum, the Supreme Court also considered past disciplinary actions against the attorney, including a public reprimand on May 14, 1992, for conflict in successive government and private employment; a public reprimand Oct. 26, 2000, for communications violation; three private admonitions; law license suspension Aug. 27, 2009, for 181 days; suspension for one year on Apr. 22, 2010; and suspension for three years on March 24, 2011.

Within 10 days from the date of the opinion, Marcum must notify all courts in which he has matters pending and notify all clients with whom he is actively engaged and must provide copies of the letters being sent to the office of bar counsel. He must also cancel and cease any advertising and pay $1,443.93 for the cost of the proceeding.

PROPERTY: College, Paintsville reach agreement

Virginia to explore the possibility of opening a branch of that university's pharmacy school at the Teays Branch location. But it was announced in May that the University of Charleston's Board of Trustees had concluded that opening a branch in Paintsville wasn't in the best interest of the university.

University of Charleston's vice president of communications, Jennie Ferretti, said that a lot of factors were considered in making the final decision not to expand in Paintsville.

If approved, the proposal would have established a four-year pharmacy doctorate program in January 2012 at the Paintsville campus, where Midway College had begun renovating a building.

Paintsville Mayor Bob Porter said in May that Midway "will return the building and property to us and we'll figure out what to do with it."

"Millions have been spent, and it's in better shape now than when we gave it to them," Porter said in May. "It's a beautiful building and there's been a lot of excavation work done on the property for parking. We're looking for interested parties."

Midway College said in a status report issued in June 2011 that it had received 437 applications for its inaugural class at the Paintsville location and that 77 award letters had been delivered.

As of May 16, 2011, the pharmacy school had hired 17 faculty members and employed a total of 25 faculty staff members, the report said.

Friend's posts driving you bonkers? Filter them!

by Kim Komando

Kim Komando hosts the nation's largest talk radio show about consumer electronics, computers and the Internet.

You're checking out your Facebook news feed during your lunch break, and there's your dear friend Lisa kindly giving away the surprise ending of the movie you planned to see this weekend.

Erin, meanwhile, has just posted the 17th picture/video of the puppy she adopted a few days ago.

And sure enough crazy Uncle Bob has checked in with another screed about the presidential campaign. You love him. But one more rant and you swear you're going to unfriend him!

As Election Day nears, extreme political posts can be especially maddening. Crazy Uncle Bob has a lot of kindred spirits on social networks, and more of them come out of the woodwork every day.

A Pew Research Center survey earlier this year found that 38 percent of social network users have been surprised by some of their friends' political views. In what could be viewed as a win for tolerance and free speech, though, 82 percent of social media users said they didn't take steps to disconnect with someone because of differing views.

Thanks to a variety of tech tips and tools, you can screen out a lot of the noise without alienating friends and family members, or unplugging yourself from the Internet.

It's easy to block updates from Facebook friends who are temporarily getting under your skin. Hover over your friend's name, then hover over the Friends menu and deselect Show in News Feed.

Selecting Settings under the Friends menu allows you to control the amounts and types of updates you receive from a friend. You can screen a friend's status updates, life events and photos, for example, but continue to receive her music and video posts.

Not in the mood for a Facebook quiz this week? You can hide stories and unsubscribe from any person, Page, group or app.

If you encounter a political post or other story that is particularly annoying, report it as spam. That will remove it from your news feed, and Facebook's filters will try to block similar content in the future.

For more industrial-strength filtering, install a browser extension such as Social Fixer <http://www.komando.com/downloads/category.aspx?id=12250>.

Social Fixer lets you define rules - similar to email - to control what stories you want to see and hide. You can quickly choose one or all of your friends, then choose to hide status updates, photos and other types of posts. The ability to add key words makes this free tool even more powerful.

Keep in mind that Social Fixer is a browser plug-in; it has no effect on your Facebook account or what you'll see on a different computer or gadget.

On Twitter, there isn't much you can do to filter content short of blocking or unfollowing users. But Twitter's own TweetDeck app for mobile <http://www.komando.com/apps/category.aspx?id=8288> and desktop <http://www.komando.com/downloads/category.aspx?id=6818> contains a global filter in Settings to block people, words, and hashtags.

You might also want to visit the extension galleries of Firefox, Chrome and Safari to find other plug-ins that promise to clean up your Twitter news feeds.

Saint Joseph of Martin honors Dr. Chandra and Mathendra Varia

MARTIN — A huge crowd gathered at Saint Joseph Martin, a member of KentuckyOne Health, on Friday, Sept. 7 to celebrate the implementation of digital mammography and naming of the suite in honor of Drs. Chandra and Mahendra Varia.

Last fall, Saint Joseph Martin began a capital campaign to purchase digital mammography, and Drs. Chandra and Mahendra Varia made the initial donation of $125,000.

Drs. Chandra and Mahendra Varia have been affiliated with Saint Joseph Martin (formerly Our Lady of the Way Hospital) since 1979. She came to Martin as an OB/GYN and he a veterinarian, thinking it was going to be a brief stay, but fell in love with the area and people and soon called it home.

The Varias are very philanthropic and have worked closely with area institutions of higher learning to provide scholarships for the 3,400 babies she delivered from 1979 until 1990, according to a press release from the hospital. They are also civic oriented. Dr. Chandra Varia has served as a member of the Floyd County School Board since 2001 and Dr. Mahendra Varia has been a council member for the city of Martin since 1998.

"When I first came to Kentucky, no one believed I would stay," Dr. Chandra Varia said. "My husband Mahendra and I love the mountains and the people. My father always told me to give back to the community where you make your money and I have never forgotten that lesson. Having money is a pleasure, but sharing it for a great cause such as digital mammography, is most rewarding. I sincerely believe that having digital mammography at Saint Joseph Martin will save lives and that is why we have committed our resources to this campaign."

Former Gov. Brereton Jones and his wife Libby were approached to assist with this campaign through their family foundation. The former governor offered a challenge; if Saint Joseph Martin could raise $50,000 privately, he would match their efforts. This challenge was met and exceeded through the significant gifts of $10,000 or more from donors Melissa Martin, proprietor of Downtown Drug in Martin to honor her mother, Marie Samons; Drs. Gopal and Mina Majmundar of Martin and their daughters, Dr. Mamata Majmundar of Lexington and Dr. Monica Majmundar Sheth of New York, New York; Charles Johnson and James Robinson of First Guaranty Bank of Martin; and Jennifer Bricking and Eileen Levy of the Susan G. Komen Foundation Lexington Affiliate. Saint Joseph Martin administration and staff also made monetary donations to this campaign.

"This capital campaign has been a very humbling experience," said Kathy Stumbo, president of Saint Joseph Martin. "Our community has been so generous and we are very pleased that we have the most up-to-date digital mammography for our patients."

Whitt named VP

Kentucky University, has been named to the board of directors of the International Town and Gown Association.

He will serve a two-year term. His duties will include serving as co-chair of ITGA's marketing committee, which will work to develop a marketing program to help further the organization's desire to build membership among university and civic leaders worldwide. He will also serve on the Executive Directors Advisory Committee for International Relations.

"We could not be happier to have Marc officially on board with ITGA," said Kim Griffo, executive director of International Town and Gown Association. "He has been involved from day one with ITGA. Since 2009, Marc's support and efforts to advance ITGA on the national and international level have contributed tremendously to the rapid growth and strength of the organization."

"It is an honor to work with Marc in this capacity and we truly appreciate his dedication and look forward to having his expertise serve the membership of ITGA," Griffo added.

Whitt chaired the 2012 Conference Planning Committee for the Association's seventh annual University-City Relations Conference, held at ECU June 4-8. Since 2006, ITGA annual conferences have also been held at the University of Florida, Texas A & M, Murray State University, Iowa State University and the University of Colorado.

At ECU, Whitt is also an adjunct professor in the Department of Communication, where he teaches a public relations course.

ITGA strives to become the primary information resource point for common issues between institutions of higher learning and the communities in which they reside, bringing together practitioners from varying fields to address immediate issues and future opportunities. The ITGA provides a network of resources to assist civic leaders, university officials, faculty, neighborhood residents and students to collaborate on common services, programs, academic research and citizen issues, creating an improved quality of life for all residents, students, visitors, faculty and staff.

Whitt is a former Paintsville resident and 1978 graduate of Paintsville High School.
